To,
Justice Department,

I just can not understand why all these bogus allegations have a place in this volatile time of the world economy. Microsoft for long have worked very sincerely and the developers there put there very best effort to produce products of quality. And as a consumer I will always welcome any innovative work done by anybody. If Microsoft give its loyal customers any product free what's wrong in this. Even now Netscape is available free for download. But still none of is interested to use it and its because of its own demerits. Simply it can not stand with IE. So I hope AOL to work more on products and spend less time on disturbing others. If AOL have the self-respect and a vision to stand in the market then better concentrate in producing good products, not pull the legs of others.

Microsoft is not going to sue anybody because some people are distributing Linux free and thus affecting Microsoft's window business. The reason behind this is Microsoft believes in itself and had the determination and courage to fight.

So I appeal to AOL not to follow a principle of Taliban to get everything 1000 years back where we will get only a backward society. Let innovation follow its own way and help us for build our future. If AOL can not understand this they may face a problem in future because anybody's prosperity depends on MERIT not on just support of a court or anybody.

Thanks,
Ajit
